Mapping Intersections African Literature Association. Meeting, 1998 This book takes on the challenge What roles can and should African literature play in Africa s development From a variety of critical stances and perspectives the concepts of literature and of development are theorized to include and extend beyond inherited concepts and boundaries in the Humanities and the Social Sciences and thus to engage peoples everyday life experiences Approaches to the question of Africa s literature and its development range from African feminism or feminist practices to the economics and politics of public access to knowledge information and literature to communication networks and use of African languages in national education policies Twenty essays constitute the volume s four parts which focus on Diverse conceptualizations of African literature and development Critical studies of specific writers works linking their artistic development with issues and events of social or political development A philosophical consideration of the development s relationship to literature Models of activist pedagogy in African literature The structure of this volume is encompassed by two roundtable transcriptions with writers and critics for whom African literature and Africa s development is part of a larger struggle to create new space in which to thrive and envision new life inside and outside the academy African Literature Jonathan P. Lall, J. Vernon Henderson, Anthony Venables, 2017 Cities in Sub Saharan Africa are experiencing rapid population growth Yet their economic growth has not kept pace Why One factor might be low capital investment due in part to Africa's relative poverty. Other regions have reached similar stages of urbanization at higher per capita GDP. This study however identifies a deeper reason African cities are closed to the world. Compared with other developing cities, cities in Africa produce few goods and services for trade on regional and international markets. To grow economically as they are growing in size, Africa's cities must open their doors to the world. They need to specialize in manufacturing along with other regionally and globally tradable goods and services. And to attract global investment in tradable production, cities must develop scale economies which are associated with successful urban economic development in other regions. Such scale economies can arise in Africa and they will if city and country leaders make concerted efforts to bring agglomeration effects to urban areas. Today potential urban investors and entrepreneurs look at Africa and see crowded, disconnected, and costly cities. Such cities inspire low expectations for the scale of urban production and for returns on invested capital. How can these cities become economically dense, not merely crowded? How can they acquire efficient connections? And how can they draw firms and skilled workers with a more affordable, livable urban environment? From a policy standpoint, the answer must be to address the structural problems affecting African cities. Foremost among these problems are institutional and regulatory constraints that misallocate land and labor, fragment physical development, and limit productivity. As long as African cities lack functioning land markets and regulations and early coordinated infrastructure investments, they will remain local cities, closed to regional and global markets, trapped into producing only locally traded goods and services and limited in their economic growth.

Africa's Development in Historical Perspective, Emmanuel Akyeampong, Robert H. Bates, Nathan Nunn, James Robinson, 2014-08-11. Why has Africa remained persistently poor over its recorded history? Has Africa always been poor? What has been the nature of Africa's poverty and how do we explain its origins? This volume takes a necessary interdisciplinary approach to these questions by bringing together perspectives from archaeology, linguistics, history, anthropology, political science, and economics. Several contributors note that Africa's development was at par with many areas of Europe in the first millennium of the Common Era. Why Africa fell behind is a key theme in this volume, with insights that should inform Africa's developmental strategies.

Africa's Development Dynamics, 2018, African Union Commission, OECD, 2018. This first edition explores the dynamics of growth, jobs, and inequalities. It proposes ten decisive actions to promote sustainable economic and social development and to strengthen institutions in Africa.

The Dry Forests and Woodlands of Africa, Emmanuel N. Chidumayo, Davison J. Gumbo, 2010-09-23. The dry forests and woodlands of Sub-Saharan Africa are major ecosystems with a broad range of strong economic and cultural incentives for keeping them intact. However, few people are aware of their importance compared to tropical rainforests, despite them being home to more than half of the continent's population. This unique book brings together scientific knowledge on this topic from East, West, and Southern Africa, and describes the relationships between forests woodlands people and their livelihoods Dry forest is defined as vegetation dominated by woody plants primarily trees the canopy of which covers more than 10 per cent of the ground surface occurring in climates with a dry season of three months or more This broad definition wider than those used by many authors incorporates vegetation types commonly termed woodland shrubland thicket savanna wooded grassland as well as dry forest in its strict sense The book provides a comparative analysis of management experiences from the different geographic regions emphasizing the need to balance the utilization of dry forests and woodland products between current and future human needs Further the book explores the techniques and strategies that can be deployed to improve the management of African dry forests and woodlands for the benefit of all but more importantly the communities that live off these vegetation formations Thus the book lays a foundation for improving the management of dry forests and woodlands for the wide range of products and services they provide
